Domizia Salusest is a cinematographer based in London. With a foundation in documentary photojournalism, she brings a distinct, story-driven visual language to both her photography and film work.

Her work spans a range of genres, often focusing on character-led narratives and socially resonant themes. Man to Man, her short film starring David Harewood MBE, is both BIFA-and BAFTA- qualifying and has won more than 20 awards, including Best Cinematography.

She has shot two Netflix-funded shorts; the psychological thriller 27 and the observational romantic drama Queen of Diamonds, as well as the experimental drama Weirdo (now streaming on Apple TV). Her short documentary Barry the Beekeeper aired on Altogether TV on Sky and won Best Documentary at the Little Wing Film Festival.

Her most recent feature documentary as Director of Photography is set to be released on a major streaming platform as part of its Originals slate.

To date, Domizia has shot more than 25 short films and contributed second-unit cinematography to several television projects. She has recently wrapped a BFI-funded short film. Her first feature credit as a DP will be a documentary for a major streaming platform, slated for release in 2026. She is now seeking to expand further into long-form work as a Director of Photography or Second Unit DP.
